

Arapahoe Road Corridor Study To Begin

Study aims to improve mobility and accessibility from I-25 to Parker Road

Arapahoe Road corridor study

A detailed transportation study of the Arapahoe Road Corridor from I-25 to Parker Road is underway. The engineering firm David Evans & Associates, Inc. is leading a team to examine alternatives for improving mobility, accessibility and safety along this major arterial. The study goal will be to balance regional mobility with local community needs.

The study will consider all modes of transportation, including mass transit, and pedestrian and bicycle traffic. It will also address the role Arapahoe Road plays in the geographic area between I-225 on the north, and E-470 on the south. The majority of funding for the 18-month study will be from federal funds, and the remainder shared among Arapahoe County, Centennial, Greenwood Village and CDOT.

The first phase will include gathering public input, economic and land use analysis, traffic data collection and operational analysis, as well as concept development and refinement. The work will be closely coordinated with regional agencies and local governments, corridor businesses, community residents and corridor commuters to identify a long-term plan for Arapahoe Road that best meets the goals and objectives for all local communities and for regional mobility. We are requesting your assistance in identifying solutions that best serve the community.
