Arapahoe County to be “provider of choice” for City of Centennial

Arapahoe County will continue to provide public works, law enforcement and animal control services for another three years to the citizens of the City of Centennial.

Both the Arapahoe County Board of County Commissioners and the Centennial City Council recently approved a $23 million Intergovernmental Agreement, which extends the contract for services until December 31, 2006.

As with the previous IGA approved when the city first incorporated in 2001, Arapahoe County will provide law enforcement services through the Sheriff's Office and public works and animal control functions through the County's Developmental Services & Infrastructure Management department. Liquor licenses, a service previously provided by the County, will be offered through Centennial, according to the new agreement.

“We are excited that Centennial has chosen Arapahoe County to be the provider of choice for their community,” said Commissioner Susan Beckman, who serves as Board chair. “We value our positive and cooperative relationship with the City of Centennial, as well as with all our neighboring cities and counties, and look forward to continuing our successful partnership for the next three years.”
